Moreover, millions are saved each year in life insurance.

Why? Continued prosperity. A living wage for all who will work. Public faith in the integrity and safety of banking institutions and business enterprises. And deepseated American thrift, which persists though living standards rise and installment plans multiply.

Under such conditions radical social and political movements find this barren soil. The man or woman with a bank account, life insurance and a block of stock or bond or two has no appetite for political or social experimentation. Neither has he or she a taste for a political party supporting an issue holding some threat for the nation's prosperity.

UNTOUCHED WEALTH

Although its population is advancing at the rate of 50,000 a day. the world looks out upon the problem of its sustentation with an equanimity that none of the forebodings of the near-view critics can shake.

During the last quarter of a century sane approach to the settlement of industrial situations and sound solution of economic problems have contributed to the doubling of the output of the worker in the United States. Statistics record the most marvelous advance in provision of the materials for subsistence that any age has known. The part played by the United States is an epitome of what remains to be recorded in other countries whose resources have yet to be developed.

The basis of all production being land, of which there is no limit for all conceivable needs, the area of future production is ample. In recent years the arable area of the earth has been increased by millions! of acres and vaste areas of naturally fertile land have never been cultivated.

The world prospect may be resolved into an outlook for the trade of the United States, which taps the world at every point of material development and contributes the capital and genius for much of its needs. Once backward peoples are now forward-looking, and every advance made by any considerable population is in the direction of increase in production and consump-ization of this novel.

Lovely Rose Shannon, one of the sancing girls at Kelly's Ringside Cafe in the Bowery has attracted the attention of Chuck White. He escorts her home. Later he tries to unconscious. Terrified that she has killed him, Rose hastily packs her things and rushes into the night. Running through the darkened streets she stumbles suddenly across a satchel marked "Mercer National Bank." On her way to return it she is met by a policeman on the trail of the bandits. He marches her to the police station.

"Sure, an I was bargin' around with me weather eye open, thinkin' I might pick up some trail on the robbery," Reilly explained. "And as I comes down the street I bumps right into this moll totin' this bag.' He pointed to the satchel on the table, which Daniels was already beginning to examine with evident relief. "The jane's carryin' it, but silent ones, eh?" Simpson leaned when she sees me, she drops it and closer towards her and stared into starts to beat it. But I grabs her her eyes. "That ain't goin' to do quick, and asks her where she got you no good. The quicker you get it. She says she found it, but sure, this off your chest the better. You Sir, 'n I figgers it's a stall for the know what it means, don'tcha? A get-away. So I blows me whistle, nice, long stretch up the river. when they figured they were being caught, passed the loot on and relied on the moll to weep herself out of the situation. He wasn't dumb at that game—not by a long shot. "Uh huh, so you found it on the street. Just how? I suppose it dropped right out of the sky, didn't

"Oh, please, please, believe me. You must believe me! I tell you I found the bag on the street," Rose was crying afresh. "I almost fell over it, and then I stood and looked at it, and finally I picked it up. I couldn't leave it setting there-It happens every day, don't it," Simpson peered 'round at the girl, a cynical smile on his lips. He, too, was studying her intently, for the face was new to him.

"Well, Mr. Daniels," Sergeant Cassidy turned to the Cashier. "I suppose you'll want to open the bag and examine it. You've got the key, haven't you?' d, Sergeant. I'd like to get it open right away. This is certainly a great relief." He pulled a key ring from his pocket; elected one of the small keys and fitted it into the lock of the satchel. Sergeant Cassidy leaned forward eagerly. The two detectives gathered 'round the table with the officers, Reilly still holding tightly to his prisoner, all watching intently every move of the Cashier.

With a turn of the key the bag flew open and Daniels lifted out a large canvas sack and several big envelopes. The spectators pressed closer about the table. Fumbling with the string on the bag, Daniels finally untied it and allowed it to stand open. In the excitement of the moment even Reilly forgot to hold onto his prisoner. But Rose stood, her eyes wide with interest, gazing with the others. Then Daniels lifted the sack and emptied the contents out upon the table. There was an intense silence for a moment. Then sharp intakes of breath, low whistles, and a gasp. Round iron washers, the size of gold pieces lay before them on the board. "My God!" Daniels clasped his hand to his head. Rose's eyes dilated in horror as she realized almost immediately the cats' eyes at night. Carved ivories new danger that threatened her. She saw Daniels tearing open the beside

In eyes at the Sergeant and the detecdesperation she seizes a clock and tives, and then at Rose. As though strikes him with it. Chuck drops he could scarcely believe what he saw, he ran his hands through the pile of stuff on the table. It clinked dully. There was a moment's silence, and then with a sudden turn Simpson grasped Rose and pushed her into a chair.

"So you didn't know nothin' about this. You just found it on the street!" He pointed an accusing finger at his victim. "Come across, now, kid, let's have it. It'll be easier for you if you cough it all up now. Come on, spiel it off!"

"So you found it on the street, huh?" Cowles came round behind Rose's chair and shouted into her

The girl jumped nervously, shaking her head, her lips trembling. Her sobbing was becoming hysterical with this new turn of events. "Oh, so you're one of the strong, very often come back quick. Come on now, what did you do with it?" "You say you found the bag?" on now, what did you do with it?"
The Sergeant looked at Rose suspiHe grasped Rose's shoulder and

"I'm innocent, I tell you. Please believe me!" She turned an appealing glance on the Sergeant, who had been standing quietly aside watching the effects of the questioning. The Sergeant shook his head.

"Where do you work?" "I'm a dancer, Sir, up to Kelly's Ringside Cafe. I tell you I don't know anything about this. Oh, please let me go!"

"You'll go quick enough, but not where you expect!" Cowles leaned over her shoulder once more. "So you're a dancer up at Kelly's. Just a nice little girl, fresh from the country, trying to get along in a big city. Yeh, I've heard that one Come on, elster, come before. I got your number all right."

"So you're not going to talk, eh, baby? shut." Goin' to keep the little trap Simpson mimicked her voice in an aggravating manner.

"Aw, look here, kid, quit the stalling. You know damned well where that money is." Cowles pointed an accusing finger straight n her face. "Turning on the weeps don't mean a damned thing around here. We got your number right off the bat." He caught hold of her wrist, his fingers sinking deep into the soft flesh.

"All right, Cowles, no rough stuff," Sergeant Cassidy called to "They're liable to get his man. just a little rough down here," he turned to Daniels, "but you've got to deal with these babies pretty nasty sometimes. The best thing we can do is to keep her for a while and she'll either come across or someone'll be around to bail her out, and then we'll have the goods on her. We can pick up the trail from the person that comes in." "All right, baby, it's the hoose-gow for you, and the sooner you loosen up the quicker you're goin' to get out," Simpson sneered. "But how can I tell you anything when I don't know." Rose was still sobbing, unable to cope with

TULLYTOWN MEN WIN OVER HIGHTSTOWN IX

TULLYTOWN, July 11-Hightstown failed to stop the winning streak of the Tullytown nine in the game played here on Sunday, the home team winning by the score of 8 to 2.

Russ Carmen pitched well, blanking first and seventh. A. Hopkins started the game with a lone single over second. F. Hopkins sacrificed, then Horn smacked one past third, scoring A. Hopkins for the first run. Afflerbach's perfect throw nailed Horn trying to steal after Norcross reached first on an error. Pullen flied out, ending the

In the third Tullytown scored again on Riola's hard hit over third and Dutch Afflerbach's long two-bagger over White's head. The locals scored again in the fifth. Reliable Mike Riola hit safely over second and scored on Dutch Afflerbach's second two-bagger, a hard drive to right.

In the sixth Swangler singled and stole second. Cooper's single scored Swangler with the sixth run for Tullytown. Hightstown scored in the seventh on Pullen's hit, White's out to second, and a hit by Wiley.

Tullytown scored two more in the eighth. Swangler and Higgins hit safely. Chamber's sacrifice advanced both runners. Cooper's third hit of the game scored both. Hellings, Swangler and Nickerson starred on the field for the locals. Afflerbach nailed three runners trying to steal. Swangler and Cooper led with the stick, getting three hits apiece. Riola had two hits, also getting two walks. Afflerbach had two two-baggers.

For Hightstown Horn and Wolf batted best. White made a great catch in night. center. A. Hopkins at third had several hard chances. Bristol A. O. H. plays here next Sunday.
